WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Washington was amazed at the sensational disclosure of secret agreements between France and Japan for the establishment here in Washington of their mutual aims in the Far East, representatives of the Far Eastern (China) republic declared have additional evidence of the intrigues on the Asiatic coast.

A dark act by opportunists in conference, all we ask for is a chance to tell our story, said the spokesman of the leaders of the Chinese delegation. "We were deceived, and therefore we feel that it is for the only method we have of doing so, useful opinion of the document which we made a speech for themselves. We believe, which it may be, that we are bring to public attention."

The document, which Prince Saionji said he understood had been the original of the alleged France-Japanese pact, was given out yesterday in the archives of the foreign office at Paris and Tokio. PROOF OF FOREIGN INTRIGUES IN THE FAR EAST ASTOUNDING TO THE ARMAMENT CONFERENCE

CHINA HAS EVIDENCE OF MANY MORE THAN THE ONE PUBLISHED, DELEGATES SAY

REVELATIONS POINTED OUT DELEGATORS AS LESSON TO THE STATES.

THE ALLIANCE OF CHINA AND JAPAN BRINGS ON BATTLE

Supported Each Other in Every Move, Particularly on Ex-German Cables.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Washington was amazed at the sensational disclosure of alleged secret agreement between France and Japan for the establishment here in Washington of their mutual aims in the Far East. representatives of the Far East (China) republic declared they have additional evidence of Japan intrigues on the Asiatic mainland.

"We don't ask for representation in the conference, all we ask for is a chance to tell our story," said M. Sviri, one of the leaders of the far eastern delegation. "We were denied hearing, and therefore we took recourse to the only method we have—appealing to world opinion.

"The documents which we made public speak for themselves. We have others, which it may be advisable to bring to public attention."

The far easterners were frank to say they did not have the original texts of the alleged Franco-Japanese agreement. These, they asserted, rest in the archives of the foreign offices at Paris and Tokio. While they carefully refrained from disclosing the source of their information, the impression was obtained that the documents weer obtained in Tokio.

Officially the United States can take cognizance of the details made by the Siberians, but the matter is causing an "unofficial" situation. The state department was closed today and officials would, of course, make no comment.

The revelations of the far eastern delegates, however, were quickly seized upon by opponents of the conference. Senator Borah, for one, pointed to the incident as an "object lesson for the United States."

The members of the Senate foreign relations committee professed not to be surprised at the reported existence of a Franco-Japanese entente. They had suspected as much, as stated by one, ever since the Pacific communications conference, which met in Washington some months ago to arrange the disposition of the former German cables.

The foreign relations committee was informed of the developments of the conference by Norman Davis, at that time under-secretary of state, who represented the United States at the conference. Davis appeared before the committee at a number of executive sessions. He disclosed that France and Japan had supported each other practically at every turn in the negotiation of the ex-German cables. He is understood to have expressed the opinion at that time that the Franco-Japanese entente was being renewed, if it did not already exist.

Today's development indicated clearly that whatever else may result from the revelations made by the Chita representatives, the alleged Franco-Japanese alliance will come in for close comment when the Senate gets down to the job of ratifying the work of the conference.

The disclosures as to the Franco-Japanese entente may or may not be "fatal" said Senator Borah today, in commenting on the affairs. "We must naturally await further developments and hear all sides before we reach any final conclusions ourselves.

"My impression, however, is that the disclosures are true simply because what is alleged to be revealed is precisely in keeping with the way such things are done.

"Take, for instance, the Moroccan affair. There was an open published treaty between certain European powers and then there was a secret agreement made between two of them, which was directly in contradiction to the spirit and the purpose of the treaty which was given to the public.

"All this has now been established beyond any doubt, as a historic fact, and yet the existence of this secret agreement was denied over and over again by the powers that signed it and by the foreign ministers of the governments who made it.

BENNETT-SHELLY

The marriage of Miss Frances A. Shelly to Clarence R. Bennett was solemnized at high noon today in the First Congregational church on Volusia avenue.

The church was most tastefully decorated with a profusion of bamboo, palms and smilax, with a large wedding bell of white and evergreen suspended above the altar. A special feature of the decorations was 22 lighted candles, significant of the new year.

The bride was gowned in a most becoming suit of hand embroidered white georgette, trimmed in satin rosebud and silk French lace, with silk moline hat draped with a gorgeous white plume; white kid beaded slippers and carried a beautiful bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

The groom was neatly dressed in a becoming suit of navy blue.

The ceremony commenced with an organ prelude by Mrs. Arthur N. Otis, and was followed by a solo by Mrs. I. M. Ramsey, sister of the bride.

At the first sound of the wedding march, the following bridesmaids and ushers entered: Misses Margaret Stanford, Mildred Simmons, Reba Harris, Julia Zachary, Messrs. J. A. Hazard, Ted Myers, Richard Niven, Jr., and Curtis Gardiner.

Next entered the matron of honor, Mrs. I. W. Ramsey, dressed in a beautiful dress of white silk lace over blue, with a lovely bouquet of pink roses, followed by the bride, Miss Frances Shelly, on the arm of her father, U. S. Shelly, who proceeded down the center aisle, while the groom, Clarence R. Bennett, entered by the side entrance and was accompanied by his groomsman, M. L. Barre.

The ring ceremony was performed by Rev. W. L. Lewis, pastor of the Congregational church.

Immediately following the wedding, the entire wedding party proceeded to the Shelly home at 127 Grandview avenue, Seabreeze, where a wedding breakfast was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bennett will leave by auto this afternoon for an extended wedding trip.

BIG GAME ON THE COAST TODAY WILL BE PLAYED IN MUD

PASADENA, CALIF., Jan. 2.—There was every indication today that the annual East versus West football classic of the tournament of roses, in which the unfeated Washington and Jefferson eleven will clash with the University of California, will be played in a sea of mud. Heavy rain, starting early yesterday and continuing over night, thoroughly soaked the turf of Tournament park despite precautions taken by covering the field with straw.

Today brought clearing skies and cool weather. There were indications that the game would be played under excellent conditions, except for the muddy field. The temperature was ideal for football.

The Eastern team was plainly elated with weather conditions as the rain has kept the temperature from rising and Coach Neale's men are reported to be excellent mudders. The California team had hoped for a dry fast field, but are no slouches on a muddy field. The wet field will operate to keep the score down to a low limit, the football wizards predicted today.

Betting had shifted from 3 to 1 on California, to 2 to 1 early today. Even money was being wagered that California will win by two touchdowns. There was plenty of eastern money in sight, indicating the belief of the W. & J. supporters in the ability of their team to take the measure of the California "wonder" team which has not tasted defeat in two seasons, and last year conquered Ohio State on the same field, 28 to 0.

DEATH OF SENATOR PENROSE IS FOLLOWED TODAY BY SCRAMBLE FOR HIS IMPORTANT POSITION

SCRAMBLE IS ON FOR THE POSITIONS HELD BY DEAD SENATOR.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The death of Senator Penrose leaves a big gap in the Republican "old guard" leadership which had already begun today to bring about an upheaval in the National and State politics of the party in which he was such a conspicuous figure for so many years.

While the body of the Senator rested in his Philadelphia home, preparatory to the funeral a scramble for the important Republican committee assignments in the Senate rendered vacant by his death was under way.

Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, ranking republican member of the all-important Senate Finance Committee, was slated to succeed Penrose as it's chairman by the customary rule of Seniority.

The vacancies on the banking and currency, immigration and naval affairs committees, of which Penrose had long been a member, were to be filled by the Republican committee on committees.

Republican members of the Senate "agricultural bloc" were casting longing eyes upon the openings offered them in the banking and currency and the finance committees left by the death of the Pennsylvania Senator. A clash between them and Republican Senators from Eastern States who desire to retain their control of the committees was regarded as inevitable.

A complete realignment of important committee assignments may have to be worked out by the Republican leaders to prevent an open break in the Republican Senatorial ranks.

Penrose was one of the last of the "old guard" leaders, who stood between the agricultural, progressive and independent Senators of the Republican party, and their growing ascendency over the Senate and it's dominant committees.

Penrose's death was also threatening to split the Republican party in Pennsylvania with factional strife.

Even in the sick man he was during the last months of his eventful life, Penrose was able to retain much of the power he had wielded for years as the "big boss" of the Republican organization of his state since the death of Mathew Stanley Quay.

His political enemies at home, growing increasingly restive under his leadership, were ready to seize the reins he held when Senator Knox died and the appointment of a successor fell to Governor Sproul, with whom Penrose was no longer on friendly terms.

White House influences prevented an open breach, however, and Senator Crow, himself a sick man, was appointed to fill Knox's place as a means of patching up a temporary true between the Penrose and anti-Penrose forces in Pennsylvania.

Crow had joined with Sproul in ousting the Penrose speaker of the House at Harrisburg during the fight between the Penrose and anti-Penrose factions during the last session of the Pennsylvania legislature. Crow, for years Republican state committeeman, had been a Penrose ally before the "break" with the "Big Boss."

Governor Sproul is known to have senatorial aspirations, and he may succeed to Penrose's seat in the Senate, but not without considerable opposition from Penrose's friends in the Pennsylvania organization.

Funeral Arrangements Not Completed.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2.—Arrangements had not been completed this morning for the funeral of Boies Penrose, who died Saturday night in Washingtotn. His brother, Dr. Chas. B. Penrose, was awaiting word from another brother, Spencer Penrose, of Colorado, before making final plans for the services.

In keeping with the wish of the Pennsylvania Senator, the funeral is expected to be private. Penrose had expressed the desire before his death that the service would be as quiet and as simple as possible.

The body is lying at the Senator's bachelor home in Spruce street.

Harding Revives Annual Affair After 8 Years

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The coldest weather of the winter did not prevent official Washington, the diplomatic correspondents and a goodly portion of the "general public" from turning out en masse today for the first White House New Year's reception in eight years.

This annual custom of a personal exchange of greetings between the chief executive and the public, discontinued during the Wilson administration, was revived when the President and Mrs. Harding took their places in the famous Blue Room at 11 o'clock to receive the first of their thousands of guests.

The Harding's first New Year's reception promised to eclipse in attendance and brilliance scores of similar affairs which have been held at the White House in past years.

Members of the cabinet, the President's Secretary, Foreign Ambassadors, and the directors of the Pan-American union, headed the long line of guests. The foreign plenipotentiaries presented a brilliant picture in their gaily colored uniforms, adorned with silver and gold braid. A bower of evergreen and flowers formed a back ground for the President and Mrs. Harding.

The President's official family dropped out of the line when they had greeted the executive and his wife, and joined with the Harding's in receiving Chief Justice Taft and his colleagues of the supreme court, other members of the judiciary, former members of the cabinet, and Ambassadors and Ministers to the United States.

In the early afternoon, the chief assistants and directors of all government departments were to be received, followed by members of patriotic societies. After two o'clock, the general public was to be admitted, the President and Mrs. Harding continuing their "open house" until four o'clock.

Fastest things on earth must be chaste; they are rarely run down.

AMERICAN COMMERCE IS FACING NEW YEAR WITH BRIGHTEST PROSPECTS

RATIFICATION ASSURED

DUBLIN, Jan. 2.—The tide of sentiment in favor of ratification of the Irish peace treaty grew stronger today on the eve of the meeting of Dail Eireann. Sinn Feiners in the Thuries district, including even the extremists factions, unanimously adopted a resolution demanding that their representatives in Dail vote for ratification.

The archbishop of Cashel, in a new year's sermon said:

"There can be no hope for a peaceful new year if Dail fails to ratify the pact. Rejection will mean terrorism and turmoil."

The Thuries district was the scene of violent conflicts between the Sinn Feiners and British military forces before the armistice.

Farmers of County Waterford met at Dungarvan and adopted a resolution saying that if the treaty were not ratified, 95 per cent of the voters in the county would be misrepresented in Dail Eireann.

Apparently accepting ratification as a foregone conclusion, the Sinn Fein minister of labor announced the creation of conciliation machinery with power to act immediately to prevent a threatened railway strike. The Westmeath council ordered the representatives of that county in Dail to vote for ratification.

HAYS CONSIDERS MOVING PICTURE POSITION, REPORT

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Postmaster General Hays said today he would give "deliberate consideration" to an offer made by a group in the motion picture industry of a highly paid position.

"It is true that I have received a business and legal offer from the motion picture industry," Hays said. "I am going to meet representatives of the industry in Washington January 14 for a full and frank discussion. I will then give my answer."

COMPTROLLER OF CURRENCY FINDS PROSPECTS GOOD

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The dawn of the New Year brought to the United States a splendid opportunity for a complete recovery of business and financial prosperity, it was declared today by D. R. Crissinger, comptroller of the currency.

"Business and financial conditions have shown improvement during 1921," Crissinger said. "Our business has been growing steadily and we are now passed the most difficult part of the period of readjustment. As far as I can see, nothing that happens in the future will interfere with the continued readjustment and betterment in the business situation."

He predicted that the year would be marked by a "steady growth" in business and that "we should see a good deal of activity in the building trade."

"We should see a good deal of activity in the building trade," he said. "Money is now available for building purposes and there is a great need for new construction."

Crissinger said he was optimistic that the year would be marked by a "steady growth" in business and that "we should see a good deal of activity in the building trade." "Money is now available for building purposes and there is a great need for new construction."

LOSS OF SIX AND HALF BILLION DOLLARS IN 1921 COMPARED WITH 1920.

WORLD TRADE FELL TO NEW LOW POINT DURING PAST YEAR

Imports From Great Britain Show Decline of $280,000,000 and Almost Same From Canada.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—American commerce, staggering under the greatest annual losses in its history, faced the new year today with bright prospects for a complete recovery.

America's world trade during 1921 totalled only $7,000,000 in round figures, the lowest volume of international business recorded for this country since before the war. According to the department of commerce, this represented a loss of $6,500,000,000 over the volume of commerce transacted in 1920, the "peak" year in American trade.

The downward plunge of the nation's commerce, however, halted in the fall of last year, and in December reports showed an upward trend had started. Government experts today were optimistic of the New Year, confidently predicting a sharp recovery in American world trade. Both imports and exports felt the full force of depression during 1921, although government experts were quick to declare the declines "only natural" after the peak year of 1920. Imports for last year, totalling only $2,500,000,000, were less than half of the imports of the year previous and in the last five years. Similarly, the total exports, amounting in round figures to $4,500,000,000, were only 54 per cent of the previous year's total, and also the lowest recorded in the last five years.

One serious condition revealed by the year's commercial reports was the gain of imports over exports. In 1919 the exports held the lead by $3,020,000,000, while in the following year this lead fell off to $2,950,000,000. Last year, however, imports climbed on a comparative scale until the lead of exports was cut to $2,000,000,000. This was a comparative loss of one billion dollars in two years. The nation's export trade showed a loss in volume with every country in the world, excepting only Mexico and Germany, as compared to the previous year. The losses ranged from 30 to 70 per cent.

The gain in exports to Mexico totalled $15,000,000, while the increase in trade to Germany totalled $109,000,000. Heavier shipments of wheat, corn, cotton and lard accounted for the increases.

The losses in exports to Great Britain amounted to $813,000,000 compared to 1920's trade, while a $368,999,999 loss was marked in the export trade to Canada. At the same time, a decline of $200,000,000 in the trade to China and of $155,000,000 in the trade to Japan were also noted. In imports, America bought less during the year, as compared to 1920, from every nation excepting only Greece. The losses ranged from 20 to 80 per cent.

The imports from Great Britain showed $1,000,000,000 due to heavy buying of wool and tobacco. The super cargo was received in trade from the British East Indies. The greatest amount of goods received in China, imports also showed a loss of $200,000,000.

Imports from Japan showed a decrease of $200,000,000, while there was a loss of $300,000,000 in Canadian goods. Although Japan was a heavy buyer among the Asiatic countries, all South American countries showed a heavy decline.

BUY BASEBALL TICKETS TODAY.

As a stimulant, rents on every purchaser and siders of the Triple Cities who expect to remain in Daytona at least a portion of next summer to buy one or more season tickets for admittance to the baseball games next season. Without the support to be gained through the advance sale of the season tickets, the Daytona club will be unable to meet its obligations and will have to drop out of the Florida State League. A course for the sale of the tickets, up admission to all the home games of the year at $33, is now in most not fail.

Daytona Islanders are conceded today to be the fastest and best ball club in the league. The several positions on the team which were vacated by players who went to a higher league have been filled with men who are believed to be equally as good. Daytona has more of her last year's players than most of the other teams, and therefore is not planning for the 1922 season by guess work.

If the fans will give the club proper support through the purchase of tickets, the club in turn will be able to give the fans a team of which they may be justly proud and one which will give the other teams a run for the pennant.

FRANCE'S FOLLY OF ARMAMENT.

Peace is costing France half as much as being at war.

France's total national debt now is 328,000,000,000 francs, an increase of nearly a half since the war ended.

Her entire national wealth is estimated at 400,000,000,000 francs. She is mortgaged 82 per cent of her face value.

Clemenceau warns the French Senate that by 1930 France's debt will be 425,000,000,000 francs. Debt then will exceed her national wealth.

France—insisting on arming to the teeth, especially with submarines—is grasping a cost iron life preserver.

Russian art continues to be the rage among many American intellectuals. Hypnotized by Russian novels, plays, dancing and grotesque paintings, they see in these "a sunrise of a coming civilization. More probably, it is the sunset. Art is the blossom that comes when civilization is about to go to seed. But the agonies through which Russia has been going may give her a rebirth of strength. That would mean less art, more of the concrete things of life. Thus her future is hopeful, if you look at it through normal eyes.

Children, tinkering with wireless telephony and toy moving picture outfits, make us grown-ups realize that we'll have to double our step to keep pace with the world. Some nursery movie films are sold as low as a cent a foot. The price ranges up to 10 cents a foot for films that can't catch fire or explode. Do you remember the first movie you saw—how it thrilled you? The scientific marvel of yesterday is the toy of to-day. If it keeps on, we'll be getting old-fashioned every 24 hours.

That tremendous collection of books known as New York City has 175,000 trees. These are dying rapidly and tree experts predict that in twenty years from the parks of New York will be treeless. Daytona has no better citizen than the householder who plants and cares for trees.

The new Japanese yearly budget appropriates the equivalent of $323,000,000 for army and navy. Schools get $28,100,000. Eleven times as much for war preparations as for education! The person who does not see the fallacy of that is a 14 karat idiot. And people are beginning to see! People of all nations, of all races, are coming out of their trance. The super-hypnotist, War, is far from dead. But his ultimate extinction is inevitable. Handwriting is on the wall.

"TANKS" TO TRANSPORT NEW YORK SECURITIES

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Armored cars, with armed guards, will soon be running millions of dollars worth of securities, will soon be seen in the downtown financial district here, according to plans made public. The first car planned will be modeled after the bullet-proof tanks now used in the New York post-office. These will replace the messenger and are expected to end the armed boxes which reach into the millions.

MANY SWIMMING RECORDS MADE DURING 1921

Nearly Forty New Standards Accepted by Official Body During the Year—Many Records in Swimming Made During the Year Just Closing—Soccer and College Water Polo Made Big Progress, Says Resume of the Year's Sport.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—From every point of view the year 1921 stands out as the greatest in the history of American swimming. Water sports enjoyed unprecedented popularity with both amateur and public, men and better competitors were in the field than ever before, and swimmers of both sexes broke world, national, collegiate and scholastic records.

Nearly forty new standards were accepted officially by the A. A. U. and this fact takes credit of the tremendous activity going on throughout the country. Many records were broken, but of doubtful authenticity, and of a number of feats accomplished almost by Miss Gertrude Ederle, first of the New York Women's Association Swimmers, Norman Ross of the Illinois A. C. and Larry Longstreet of Yale.

Great interest was evidenced in water and college water polo. The teams of the Illinois A. C. and Princeton intercollegiate polo champions, were also conceded prominent honors.

In addition A. A. U. aquatics the year saw the Olympic games, which turned to the Illinois A. C. and the women's to the New York A. C. Many of the best swimmers were in both the indoor and outdoor meetings.

The following are the outstanding swimming records made in 1921:

London Has Forgotten How to be Gay as the Result of War Habits

"PUSSYFOOT" DOES A LITTLE PREDICTING.

The world will be bone-dry in 1950, predicts "Pussyfoot" Johnson, of the Anti-Saloon League. He is in Jacksonville today, after a nine-months tour of Europe and India.

India will be the next country to give up liquor, says Pussyfoot. India has 350,000,000 people. All except 62,000,000 of these are forbidden to drink, by their religions. The Hindu wets are becoming temperate, Pussyfoot found. More important, they are running out of rum.

Denmark, which prefers whisky to beer, is climbing on the wagon—235 of its parishes have voted dry.

"Pussyfoot" Johnson may be guessing wrong on the absolute date at which the world will be bone-dry. But it's coming. The prohibition movement, which got its real start in America, is sweeping the world.

Man is freeing himself from the slavery of drugs and John Barleycorn, as he freed himself from human slavery.

Farmers in the depths of gloom should take cheer at this: For the first eleven months of the year, wheat exports from our country were 269,497,218 bushels in 1921, against 192,383,961 bushels in 1920 and 138,566,764 in 1919. And, for eleven months, corn exports were 118,811,271 bushels in 1921, against 14,720,333 bushels in 1920 and 9,666,544 bushels in 1919. This again proves that falling-off in foreign trade is largely a price hoax. The consolation is that these big grain exports will cut down the carry-over. That favors higher prices for farmers in 1922.

The Bell telephone system uses up 500,000 cedar telephone poles a year, also 200,000 chestnut poles and 85,000 creosoted pine poles. That is an achievement, measured in usual business terms. But it means 785,000 trees chopped down yearly. Why not use concrete or steel poles and conserve the timber? Forests are vanishing like snow on a hot stove lid. The timber wolf is howling at the door.

BUY BASEBALL TICKETS TODAY.

An obligation rests on every merchant and citizen of the Triple Cities who expects to remain in Daytona at least a portion of next summer to buy one or more season tickets for admittance to the baseball games next season. Without the support to be gained through the advance sale of the season tickets, the Daytona club will be unable to meet its obligations, and will have to drop out of the Florida State League. A canvas for the sale of the tickets, to admit one to all the home games of the year at $33, is now on. It must not fail.

Daytona Islanders are conceded today to be the fastest and best ball club in the league. The several positions on the team which were vacated by players who went to a higher league have been filled with men who are believed to be just as good. Daytona has more of her last year's players than most of the other teams, and therefore is not planning for the 1922 season by guess-work.

If the fans will give the club proper support through the purchase of tickets, the club in turn will be able to give the fans a team of which they may be justly proud and one which will give the other teams a run for the pennant.

Buy your ticket today.

FRANCE'S FOLLY OF ARMAMENT.

Peace is costing France half as much as being at war.

France's total national debt now is 328,000,000,000 francs, an increase of nearly a half since the war ended.

Her entire national wealth is estimated at 400,000,000,000 francs. She is mortgaged 82 per cent of her face value.

Cheron warns the French Senate that by 1930 France's debt will be 425,000,000,000 francs. Debt then will exceed her national wealth.

France—insisting on arming to the teeth, especially with submarines—is grasping a cast-iron life preserver.

Russian art continues to be the rage among many American intellectuals. Hypnotized by Russian novels, plays, dancing and grotesque paintings, they see in these the sunrise of a coming civilization. More probably, it is the sunset. Art is the blossom that comes when civilization is about to go to seed. But the agonies through which Russia has been going may give her a rebirth of strength. That would mean less art, more of the concrete things of life. Thus her future is hopeful, if you look at it through normal eyes.

Children, tinkering with wireless telephony and toy moving picture outfits, make us grown-ups realize that we'll have to double our step to keep pace with the world. Some nursery movie films are sold as low as a cent a foot. The price ranges up to 10 cents a foot for films that can't catch fire or explode. Do you remember the first movie you saw—how it thrilled you? The scientific marvel of yesterday is the toy of today. If it keeps on, we'll be getting old-fashioned every 24 hours.

That tremendous collection of bricks, known as New York City, has 175,000 trees. These are dying rapidly and tree experts predict that in twenty years even the parks of New York will be treeless. A system of finely wooded parks and a profusion of shade trees in residence districts are worth more to any city than 10,000 skyscrapers. Daytona has no better citizen than the householder who plants and cares for trees.

The new Japanese yearly budget appropriates the equivalent of $323,000,000 for army and navy. Schools get $28,500,000. Eleven times as much for war preparations as for education! The person who does not see the fallacy of that is a 14-karat idiot. And people are beginning to see! People, of all nations, of all races, are coming out of their trance. The super-hypnotist, War, is far from dead. But his ultimate extinction is inevitable. Handwriting is on the wall.

"TANKS" TO TRANSPORT NEW YORK SECURITIES

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Armored cars, with armed guards inside and out, carrying millions of dollars worth of securities, will soon be seen in the downtown financial district here, according to plans just made public. The first car planned will be modeled after the bullet-proof "tanks" now used by the New York postoffice. These will replace the messenger and are expected to end the annual losses, which reach into the millions.

MANY SWIMMING RECORDS MADE DURING 1921

Nearly Forty New Standards Accepted by Official Body During the Year—Many Records in Swimming Made During the Year Just Closing—Soccer and College Water Polo Made Big Progress, Says Resume of the Year's Sport.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—From every point of view the year 1921 stands out as the greatest in the history of American swimming. Water sports enjoyed unprecedented popularity with contestants and public; more and better competitors were in the field than ever before, and swimmers of both sexes broke world, national, collegiate and scholastic records.

Nearly forty new standards were accepted officially by the A. A. U., and this fails to take count of performances actually rating as records, but at distances not listed, and of a number of feats accomplished abroad by Miss Ethelda Bleibtrey, then of the New York Women's Swimming Association; Norman Ross of the Illinois A. C., and Lady Langer of Honolulu.

Great progress was witnessed in soccer and college water polo. The teams of the Illinois A. C. and Princeton university, pennant winners, were the strongest produced here.

In all-around A. A. U. aquatics the men's team championship was captured by the Illinois A. C., and the women's by the New York W. S. A. Each ran up the highest scores in both the indoor and outdoor national titles tests.

The following are the outstanding swimming records made in 1921:

WHEAT CROP IS SOLD QUICKLY

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 2.—Only 23.5 per cent of this year's wheat crop of 128,101,000 bushels remained in the farmers' storage bonds on November 1, in comparison with 35 per cent of the 1920 crop a year ago, according to a report issued by [illegible] Mohler, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture. Solution, if over, has the wheat crop been marketed so promptly, he declared Mohler.

London Has Forgotten How to be Gay as the Result of War Habits

LONDON, Jan. 2.—This one-time metropolis of the world has forgotten how to be gay. It has lost its capacity for enjoyment. Midnight revels and supper parties are things of the past.

Restaurant and railroads report an extraordinary falling in patronage and declare London has been demoralized, hypnotized and broken spirited by wartime restrictions. The city now deliberately chooses to go to bed at eleven.

Six years ago the night life of London—its suppers, entertainments and dances—was one of its principal features. Every night, even at eight to four in the morning, was the busiest period of the day. People came from afar for the pleasure of a few nights in the city.

And then, just 18 months ago came the heavy hand of what was known as Lord Derby's law, otherwise the Defence of the Realm act. It was made illegal to obtain a drink after nine-thirty. Dancing was practically ruled out entirely and [illegible] restaurants had to shut up completely. Zeppelins and [illegible] had [illegible] London's sky [illegible].

[illegible] after three years of peace the restrictions were lifted. [illegible] to get a drink in London until [illegible] and even up to [illegible] in places [illegible]. Champagne can [illegible] the price [illegible] of cost. [illegible] no longer necessary to carry a quart flask of whiskey in the way of Lamentous according to [illegible].

At any rate, the restaurants, [illegible] and dancing places thought so. They [illegible] plans for an orgy of [illegible] expected a big [illegible]. The managers of London [illegible] in [illegible] and [illegible] at midnight [illegible] and [illegible]. [illegible] had [illegible] the [illegible].

All [illegible] Londoners [illegible] that there were [illegible] after the theatres. They could not realize that the trains were permitted or that it was really legal to dance after midnight. The early-to-bed habit had grown too strong.

Regretfully the tubes have had to admit the fact. They have even counted the passengers leaving Piccadilly Circus—the heart of London—on four trains leaving in various directions at 12:30 a. m. On one there were twenty-two people, on another thirty-four, on the third, thirteen, and the fourth, eleven. And each of these trains is scheduled to carry 500 people. No wonder that transportation authorities are debating whether late traffic is worth while.

Restaurants tell a similar story. At the Savoy hotel, in 1913, about 250 suppers used to be served nightly. Now the maximum is about 150. The same state of affairs occurs in all the other fashionable hotels and restaurants. Night life is still strange to London.

It may be that, under crushing taxation, everyone is hard up. Perhaps war horrors and humanitarian restrictions have knocked the gayety out of London's heart. Whatever the cause, London is now a sadder place than many a second-rate provincial city.

Baron Kato and Other Delegates, Prelude Subject

In the prelude by Dr. Robert Stuart MacArthur to his sermon in Calvary Baptist Church, Daytona Beach and Seabreeze, Sunday, January 1, 1922, he spoke as follows:

"It is a beautiful thing that Admiral Baron Kato and other delegates to the arms conference in Washington sent out Christmas greetings to the American people. It is surprising that these non-Christian foreigners so quickly caught the spirit of our Christmastide. . . . It was an act of wise policy on the part of all those delegates both those coming from Christian and non-Christian lands, to join so heartily with our people in this Christmas celebration. Their action is well worthy of hearty commendation.

"Baron Kato issued his statement on behalf of Japan; of him I shall speak more fully later in this prelude. The speaker for France, in the absence of M. Briand and M. Viviani was M. Sarraut; Senator Schanzer represented Italy. The speaker for the Netherlands was Jonkheer Van Karnebeek; China was represented by Dr. Chung-hui Wang; Wellington Koo, Alfred Sze and Chung Hui Wang; these three men were joined in one statement. Vice Foreign Minister Hanihara of the Japanese delegation gave a message to the press and also to the American people. The distinguished Mr. Balfour embodied in a statement the sympathy and warm greeting of the British people. It was most natural for Mr. Balfour to issue a statement expressive of his interest in the Christmas and the American people, for he was not only a Christian statesman speaking to his own people, but the English language is his native tongue.

"Senator Schanzer spoke for Italy in a truly Christian spirit. He affirmed that the principles of the Christian religion not only were illustrated in the Christmastide but were inspiring this conference to lay down a more solid basis for preserving peace in the whole world. He also expressed his sincere wishes for all the people in the United States. The three Chinese also acknowledged the significance of the Yuletide and expressed good wishes for all Americans. The Japanese delegates and all the other delegates also said in behalf of America and America's people. But for the moment I am specially interested in Baron Kato and his message. His words imbued with the spirit of this historic conference.

"Baron Kato is a naval man, of much responsibility has fraught upon the conference opened. He was born in Nagoya in 1859. He is graduate of the Imperial Naval College at Tokyo. The outbreaking war found him in the Japanese navy. He was stationed at the Chinese port of Tientsin at the time of the Japanese-Russian war. He was a member of the Japanese delegation to the Peace Conference at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, in 1905. He was minister of marine in the cabinet of Count Okuma in 1914. He was appointed a member of the Imperial Council in 1915. He was created a baron in 1916. He was appointed Minister of Marine in 1918. He was appointed Premier of Japan in June, 1922. He is a man of great ability, of great experience, of great responsibility. He is a man of great influence in his own country. He is a man of great influence in the world. He is a man of great influence in this historic conference.

Hotel Men Most Optimistic Over Winter Prospects

The present winter season in the Halifax Country, one of the most alluring garden spots in the entire Land of Flowers, promises to be one of the most successful and at the same time one of the most brilliant in all its history.

It has been truly said, in the language of the agriculturist, that Florida's chief "crop" is the tourists, or those who hie themselves each season from the wintry winds and the ice and snow of the northland to the sunny southern climes of Florida, the winter playground of the nation.

There are many omens by which Floridians may forecast to what extent this annual crop of winter visitors is to be harvested, but there is one sign which always proves infallible, and that is known to those whose business it is to keep a sensitive finger upon the pulse beats of the Halifax country's chief industry—the tourist industry, if one may call it that—centered in its hotels.

If business is good at the hotels, or the prospects of business are good, then the business of the Triple Cities and of the entire section is certain to be good. There is no guess work about it and no prophetic vision is required to reach that conclusion.

Therefore, judged by this criterion, the claiming assertion of this story, that the present winter season promises to be one of the most successful and one of the most brilliant in the history of the Halifax Country, is not only justified, but is subject of proof in advance.

The Daily News has made it its business to interview many of the leading hotel men in the Triple Cities and Ormond, and without exception they predict one of the best seasons they have ever had. There is a pronounced note of optimism in all their discussion of the prospects for this winter that plainly is not forced. They talk convincingly of the amount of business they expect to do and they are not only talking about it, but they are backing up their judgment by making preparations for operating at full capacity, when the season gets fully under way.

Many of the hotels have shown their confidence in the outlook by spending considerable sums of money in improving their hostelries, where improvements were needed, or by brightening up the premises, inside and out, with fresh paint, new furnishings, new lighting systems, new floors and in many other ways adding to the attractiveness of the homes they offer the winter guests.

Hotels which opened for the season in December report that the patronage for this time of year is all that could be expected. Many of them announce the arrival of guests who are considered as regulars, having been coming to the same hotel for several seasons, while many others classed as "regulars" have made reservations and are expected to arrive soon after the first of the year.

Hotel men agree that the tourists are making reservations somewhat later this year than is the custom, but all of them say that bookings have picked up amazingly in the last two or three weeks and now are increasing rapidly.

There is one prominent hotel man in Daytona, who has been in the business for many years and who usually can predict with remarkable accuracy the success of the winter season, who admitted that until recently he had been rather dubious about the prospects for this season.

"I did not feel absolutely sure that this season was to be a success until about two weeks ago," he said. "Bookings had been rather slow for this time of year, and I hardly knew what to expect. Now I realize that it meant nothing more than that tourists are booking a little later this year. They are coming in fast now, and by the middle of January, or certainly, by the latter part of January, we will be running at full capacity."

Another prominent hotel man says that while he does not expect to run to full capacity during the early part of the season he expects to more than make it up the latter part of the season. He reaches this conclusion by the simple process of looking at his bookings, and they show that on the season's business as a whole he is certainly assured of a normal business if not an increase over last year.

Realizing that it is the obligation of a hotel to offer its patrons something more than a room to sleep in and a place to eat, many of them are paying particular attention to the selection of the best orchestras that can be obtained, are putting golf courses and tennis courts in the best possible condition and are working out programs of dinners, dances, ball of various kinds and other features that will prove entertaining to their guests.

Jazzy Music's Erotic Influence is Ruining Girls, says Reformer

Pathological, Nerve Irritating, Sex Exciting Music Subtitles Moral Makeup of Young Women, Reports Illinois Vigilance Association.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2—Moral disorder is coming to hundreds of young American girls through "the pathological, nerve-irritating, sex-exciting music of jazz orchestras," according to the Illinois Vigilance Association, which has instituted a crusade to arouse parents, teachers and schools to the danger to youth manhood.

"In Chicago alone the association's investigators have found 'up' 600 of 1,000 girls in the last 18 months to jazz dance halls.

"Girls in small towns, as well as the city, are in jazz halls, and such conditions are taking place in practically every Illinois community, that arouse public indignation.

"The degrading music in vogue not only in disorderly places, but in high school affairs, is ruining nerve tones and is accelerating society's decline," declares the Illinois Vigilance Association, who has prepared a pamphlet about dealing with the problem.

The report says that the vigilance society has in mind to awaken society, but wishes to awaken the public conscience to the present danger and future consequences of jazz music.

Referring to the Lena Salem girls, the Illinois Vigilance report says:

"The demoralizing part played in jazz music and dancing in the experience of these girls was remarkably demonstrated in their stories. One observes the blue light of the jazz dance hall, the dance floor, the dancers, how in Chicago's Second Ward, here investigators for the vigilance association found the logical culmination of so-called modern dance.

"Not the distinctive notes of the saxophone and the wild beat of the tom-tom was responsible for the indecent dances, but the suggestive music, which, in the words of the girls, which included music here and girls apparently in their home, complete with the dance, are by no means a small factor of delinquency.

"Indeed, it is clear that girls, associated with other girls, and with men, have learned lessons in which the young girl, who is not in the dance hall, or in the dance hall, but should return to a normal life, cannot be a normal woman and citizen.

"The Illinois Vigilance Association is in the dance hall, in the home, in the school, in the church, in the home, in the school, in the church, in the home, in the school, in the church

Jazzy Music's Erotic Influence is Ruining Girls, says Reformer

Pathological, Nerve Irritating, Sex Exciting Music Befuddles Moral Make-up of Young Women, Reports Illinois Vigilance Association.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2—Moral disaster is coming to hundreds of young American girls through "the pathological, nerve-irritating, sex-exciting music of jazz orchestras," according to the Illinois Vigilance Association, which has instituted a crusade to arouse parents, churches and schools to the danger to young womanhood.

In Chicago alone the association's representatives have traced the fall of 1,000 girls in the last two years to jazz music.

Girls in small towns, as well as the big cities, in poor homes and rich homes, are victims of the weird, insidious, neurotic music that accompanies modern dancing.

"The degrading music is common not only to disorderly places, but often to high school affairs, to expensive hotels and to so-called society circles," declares the Rev. Phillip Yarrow, superintendent of the Vigilance Association, who has prepared a preliminary report dealing with the problem.

The report says that the vigilance society has no desire to abolish dancing, but seeks to awaken the public conscience to the present danger and future consequences of jazz music.

Referring to the 1,000 fallen girls, the Rev. Yarrow's report says:

"The demoralizing part played by jazz music and dancing in the experience of these girls was repeatedly portrayed in their pitiful stories. To observe the final fruits of the 'jazz music route' one must visit a big dance floor in Chicago's Second Ward. Here investigators for the vigilance association found the logical culmination of so-called 'modern' music.

"Mad the distracting notes of the saxophone and the weird beat of the tom-tom was witnessed conduct not hitherto seen outside the old red-light district. In full view of the audience, which included many boys and girls apparently in their teens, couples on the floor gave way to almost every form of indecency.

"Dancers violently threw their arms around each other, frequently assuming immoral postures. Lights were lowered, and to the strains of syncopated music actions that are indescribable took place. This is the full flowering—the fruition of the modern erotic music, which has so crazed and befuddled the moral make-up of young people.

The Rev. Yarrow says it is the duty of parents, churches and schools to know the manner in which the young people are dancing and, having learned this, they should enlist in a movement for wholesome, normal music and clean dancing.

MANY YOUNG GIRLS ARE FEEBLE MINDED

DETROIT, Jan. 2—"Sixty-six and one-half per cent of the delinquent girls who passed through our hands this year are feeble minded, according to figures," says Miss Mae Murray, head of the woman's division of the Detroit police department.

It is the young girl who goes wrong, says the woman police chief.

"The age of the girls averaged between 18 and 19," declared Miss Murray. "They are the prey of unscrupulous men."

ARREST BREAKS UP COUNTERFEIT GANG

NEW YORK, Jan. 2—Federal authorities here believe they have broken up a huge counterfeiting ring with arrest of Aaron Silver, who is charged with engraving and printing $18,000 in $20 Federal Reserve notes. He is held for the grand jury. Department of Justice agents said Silver had connections in Russia and that the head was of international scope.

Business Will Gain in 1922, Forecast

BY ALBERT APPLE

CHICAGO, Dec. 31—The business outlook is that 1922 will be a much better year than 1921.

Business depression began with the collapse of the silk market in May, 1920. After 20 months on the down grade, the basic industries, with exception of farming, seem definitely on the mend.

The bottom of depression was reached in July, 1921, when iron and steel—the key industry—began climbing.

Prices Lower

Price deflation made rapid strides during 1921.

Striking an average in the wholesale markets, you now can buy for $1.48 what cost $1 in 1913 and $2.72 in May, 1920, the peak of inflation. The figure was $1.77 in January, 1921.

Cost of living also deflated materially during 1921. The wage earner now pays about $162 to get what cost him $100 before the war, $205 in July, 1920, and $183 in January, 1921.

Wholesale prices of farm products have dropped most, with metals and metal products second.

The short cotton crop boosted the price in 1921. This was counterbalanced by slump in wheat and corn prices. Average farm prices are only about 10 per cent higher than in 1913.

Exports Grow

Total American exports slumped from $8,228,154,014 in 1920 to about $4,500,000,000 in 1921.

The falling off, however, was mostly due to lower prices.

In weight or volume of business exports of raw materials in 1921 increased 21 per cent over 1920. Exports of foodstuffs gained 27 per cent. Manufactured goods decreased 1 per cent in weight.

Rapid Changes

During 1921 banks that are members of the Federal Reserve System reduced their loans about $2,000,000,000.

Bank clearings in United States during 1921 totaled around $230,000,000,000. This was about 22 per cent less than 1920, due largely to lower prices. Clearings in 1921, however, were more than twice as much as in 1913.

The steel industry starts the new year running 50 per cent capacity, last July it was down to 15 per cent capacity. Steel men look for the next month to start with heavy buying by the railroads.

Copper industry may revive before steel. Stocks of surplus copper in United States have been reduced 40 per cent in the last six months.

America's gold stock increased $300,000,000 in 1921.

Building is 45 per cent better than a year ago, expressed in money spent. Much larger, allowing for price reductions.

New Companies

New companies incorporated during 1921 had total capital stock of about $7,700,000,000.

Nearly 19,000 business firms failed during 1921. That's more than twice as many as in 1920, also greatest since 1915.

In rough figures, railroads in 1921 moved 32 cars of freight for 37 in 1920 and 34 in 1919.

DETROIT AND NEW YORK IN 20 YEAR HEALTH SURVEY

DETROIT, Jan. 2—Detroit has been chosen with New York for a health investigation lasting perhaps twenty-five years, the National Research Council has notified the Detroit Board of Health.

Particular attention will be directed towards determining the influence of the air with its varying temperature, humidity and movement upon the health of many classes of people.

The council was instituted during the war at the behest of President Wilson.

Dr. House Opens Lecture Series Sunday Morning

Dr. Elwin L. House opened his series of lectures on "The Psychology of Religion" here yesterday before large and appreciative audiences at the First Congregational church. He will deliver two lectures a day, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and 7:30 in the evening, until the 13th of this month.

The eminent lecturer made his first address here yesterday morning when he gave a sermon on "The Mount of Vision" at the regular morning service of the church.

In the afternoon his subject was "An Available God."

God, he said, is the world's greatest need, and the main work of the church is to reveal Christ as Savior of the soul. "The laws of health," Dr. House declared, "are as much the laws of God as are the Ten Commandments. We therefore dishonor God when we fail to keep His temple in repair. What Jesus did, God is always doing. Jesus is a picture of the Available God who ever forgives sins, heals men of their diseases. The divine life is ever invigorating and upbuilding, quickening and enriching. It ever gives fourth vitality. The body is the recipient of God's saving, healing life."

The three realms of the mind, conscious, subconscious and superconscious, were discussed on Sunday night by Dr. E. L. House.

Monday night's subject is: "Powers of Suggestion."

"The conscious mind has reason, will, and judgment," the speaker said. "If you should lose your conscious mind, you would be taken to an institution for the insane.

"You come into the world with a subconscious mind. A child nurses subconsciously. The subconscious mind never sleeps. It is what enables you to get up at 4 a. m. without an alarm clock, if you think of it before going to bed.

"The subconscious mind has perfect memory. In your conscious mind you couldn't retain everything you have learned or acquired. So the subconscious mind is a reservoir of knowledge.

"It has the power of suggestion. When the conscious mind sleeps, the subconscious mind works on the last subject given it at night. Thru sympathy the subconscious mind, during sleep, may take ideas from great minds and in the morning the solution of a problem that was difficult the night before is easy."

"The subconscious mind governs the length of life, Dr. House declared. He said that he is apparently younger now than 10 years ago, and that before he leaves Daytona he will prove that a man ought to live to be 100.

Dr. House said that a woman once came to him with a son who had infantile paralysis. She said that God had sent the punishment on her son, and was very bitter. Dr. House told her that God hates sickness and disease, but permits it to come.

"If you're sick, it is because laws have been broken somewhere," he said. He told how he had sat by the bed of the sick boy and told the mother to tell the boy that he would soon run and play and talk with other boys.

The idea was given to the boy's subconscious mind and it worked during the night. This continued until the boy began to crawl and later to walk and talk at the end of three months.

The superconscious mind, the speaker said, is in a realm above the subconscious to which the spirit is in touch with God.

'Tis Fellers Who're Always Talkin' Good Business that Get the Business, sez Dooley

By HOWARD D. WEAVER.
(After F. P. Dunne.)

"Did ye ever stop, Hennessy," inquired Mr. Dooly, "and think about the wonderful power o' suggestion and the influence ye may have on the stranger on the casual acquaintance by the remarks ye make to 'im?"

"I—" began Mr. Hennessy, then he paused, as if thinking hard. Presently he said:

"I don't know as I git ye exactly."

"What I mean is," went on Mr. Dooly, "is that its ginerally the first impressions ye make on a man that counts with 'im in decidin' what kind o' feller ye are. If ye speak pleasantly to 'im, even when ye digestion maybe ain't exactly right and ye don't feel like it, he's likely to think ye're a pretty decent sort of a feller even when ye ain't. That's one reason why so many crooks succeed, while some business men go into the hands of the receiver, and then wonder why.

"We'll say, f'instance, ye'll go into a store to buy yeself a collar, an' as ye start to walk out the clerk'll say to ye:

"'Ye don't want to buy a tie, do ye?'

"An' the first thing that'll occur to ye is: 'The clerk's right,' and ye'll say to 'im: 'No, I don't want any tie,' an' ye'll walk out.

"But if he comes at ye brisk-like and says to ye:

"'We've a lot of fine new ties, just in. Everbody is buyin 'em, an' they look fine on a man o' your looks and build. I'll show 'em to ye.'

"An' he begins puttin' 'em on the counter, and whether ye want to see 'em or not, ye look at 'em just to keep from hurtin' his feelin's, because he's been so nice to ye, an' the first thing ye know he's wrappin' up one o' them ties. An' maybe he'll sell ye a hat an' a pair o' shoes before ye remember its Saturday and ye ain't bought the Sunday groceries.

"That, Hennessy, is what I mean by the impressions ye make on a man by yer manner o' speakin' to 'im."

"I think I know what ye mean," replied Mr. Hennessy.

"It's the same way with a city," continued Mr. Dooly. "If ye come into a town an' the first thing ye see when ye step off the train is a garbage dump or a dirty street or a gang o' loafers hangin' 'round the depot, right then ye're sorry ye come and ye look at the time table to see when the next train is leavin'. An' it don't make ye feel any better when ye get up to where they do keep the streets clean. Showin' ye all the fine hotels an' the new postoffice, or the courthouse don't rid ye mind o' that dirty street ye first saw when ye landed. Ye never feel just right about it.

"An' along the same line is the attitude the people take as well as the looks of the town that makes the stranger like it, or want to get out just as soon as he can.

"Now, there's one thing I call to mind here in Daytona, and that's the way the people'll talk about the place when ye meet 'em the first time.

"Did ye ever meet a man here and talk to him two minutes that he didn't say somethin' about the weather?

"It's a fine day, he'll say to ye. Maybe ye didn't thought of it, but when he leaves ye'll go about yer business with the idea that it is a fine day, indeed. I wonder I hadn't noticed how fine it was. I think I'll go see if the fish'll bite, and—

"An' they keep that up all the time. It makes no difference whether it's a mighty cool or a little rainy. They'll tell ye it was a fine day yesterday, or that it'll be fine tomorrow, an' after awhile ye'll begin thinkin' they don't be anything but fine weather in this, literally, they sun.

"It's the same thing in business. There's power in that day in Daytona. Any business man'll tell ye that. Just the point, 'tis, says, it's a city usually shows what he's makin' money, an' the first thing ye know, he's got no business at all to be said. It's the fellers whom's always talkin' good business that gets good business. Mighty few of 'em go broke. They keep talkin' it up, they make everbody else believe it, an' ye can't keep a man or a town down long that's like that."

"Bro'in' is a mighty good thing," admitted Hennessy.

"It's not more than boys on the job, only kind 'em there," Dooly said. "I know about."

"They say that the bulls were fine it now, and he seemed that he's been [illegible]

Science to Meet Strength in Bout at Armory Tonight

A month, whose success has been phenomenal, and a veteran of the ring will be pitted against each other when Ralph Snyder and Terry Nelson meet tonight at the Armory in a scheduled ten-pound bout.

Snyder has only been fighting two years and has not lost a fight, while Nelson has been fighting several years and has met some of the best fighters of his class in the country. Both boys are real fighters and the spectators are assured of a regular battle.

Artie O'Leary and Young Woods will meet in the six-round semi-final while local boys will appear in the preliminaries. A good all-round card has been arranged and a large crowd is expected to be on hand when the bell rings at 8 o'clock.

This country spends more money on fine paint than house paint. Save the surface and you save all.

The clock strikes 12. Horns blow. Home brewers pop corks. Another year ends, fades into eternity. Enter, 1922.

Old 1921 was a bad year for the average pocketbook. There have been worse years. But, taking it by and large, there will be few mourners as 1921 totters off the stage.

The new year, 1922, is a promising one. Prospects are that business will continue improving. The world is sure getting its balance restored, recovering from the war.

What does the new year mean to you personally?

To one thing, it means that you are a year older.

Business houses are taking inventory of goods on hand, checking up their books, finding out what was accomplished, what not, in 1921.

Why not take an inventory of yourself? Was it a good year, or a bad one, for you? Did you make progress, slip back or stand still? How does your lot compare with January 1, 1921? What mistakes did you make—what errors of judgment—that can be avoided during 1922?

On the answers to these questions, have you New Year resolutions.

Let the birth of the new year be a re-birth of your ambitions, hopes and the finer emotions that make life worth while.

ALLEGED SECRET AGREEMENTS BETWEEN FRANCE AND JAPAN CAUSE SENSATION AT CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2—Something closel yakin to a real international sensation was produced in Washington today by the publication of alleged secret agreements between the French and Japanese governments over policies that are to be pursued in the far east.

Under the provisions of these alleged documents, which were made public by the special delegation representing the far east republic, France pledged herself to support Japan's plans to establish a Japanese protectorate over Siberia, and Japan, in return, pledged herself to aid in the overthrow of the present regime in Russia and the re-establishment of the monarchy in Russia.

While the French and Japanese characterized the documents as "fakes" and "staged forgeries," their prompt denials, nevertheless, did not wholly allay the sensation produced by their publication, and it was indicated strongly today that the matter will not be allowed to rest there. The publication of the alleged documents was timely, for it was generally expected that the armament conference will take up the question of Siberia within the week now that the naval agreement is virtually concluded.

The most important of the alleged documents published by the far east republic was under date of September 2, last, two months before the assembling of the conference in Washington. It is alleged to be a note from the French foreign office to the foreign office in Tokio, and says:

"The Japanese plan to create a free republic in the east under the protectorship of Japan is comprehensible to us, and the French government will give its support to that plan by all means, and we believe the Japanese government will take into consideration our interests in the Chinese eastern railway, Manchuria, and our interests in concessions."

Further on in the same document it is stated:

"Japan must also participate in the restoration of Russia. We are ready to the downfall of restoration. Well disciplined and equipped armies are now stationed in Hungary and Jugo-Slavia who are ready to invade the country (Russia) at any moment to restore order and give their assistance to the old monarchic regime.

"The French government hopes that at this moment when the face of new Russia is being decided Japan will not put any obstacles in the way, and the French government will readily defend the interests of Japan in every respect."

Earlier in the communication it was stated:

"Q. A. Japan are pushing the eastern question so as to gain supremacy in the west. We must resist such efforts by all means, and the French government hopes to have the help of the Japanese government in that."

The documents shortly after by their publication and insisted that the documents are real, and that copies are in their possession.

On the other hand, the French and Japanese retaliated with some heat these denials that the documents are authentic, or that the sentiments they express represent the sentiments of their respective governments.

At the "proper time and place," it was stated, these denials will be made an official matter of record. It is understood that both delegations will take advantage of the first opportunity to communicate to the other powers of the Washington conference their repudiation of the alleged agreements.

There were clear intimations today however, that the matter may not be dropped with the mere denials. The publication of the alleged agreements, the purport of which is to invalidate anything the Washington conference might do with regard to safeguarding the non-aggression of the Pacific, is regarded as a serious one in diplomatic circles, and it would not be a surprise if the matter were taken up on the floor. In any event the development will almost from any quarter for the uneasy feeling of the capital regarding the work of the conference.

The whole purport of the alleged agreements is that France and Japan will play a battle royal game in Washington against the conference. The American policy toward Russia, that the powers agree to a "moral protectorship" for Russia until she is able to look after her own affairs, would go by the boards entirely under any such arrangement.

The sensation caused in Washington by the alleged agreements is comparable only to that produced when the existence of the secret agreement between Great Britain and Japan over Shantung became known.

The perturbation in French quarters today over the publication of the matter was plainly apparent. Already resentful of what they term the "unfairness of the American press toward France" in the conference, it needed by the publication of the alleged secret agreement with Japan to bring French indignation to the boiling point.

It was plainly intimated today in French quarters, the United States should summarily banish the far eastern representatives from the country for "malicious stirring up of international discord." Because today was an official holiday so far as Washington is concerned, there was no outward evidences of concern in state department quarters. Publicly, officials are taking no cognizance of the sensational revelation, but privately, they are awaiting developments with the most intense interest.

The Snowshoe Trail

My Dear Mr. Bronson:

I am informed, by the head of your provincial game commission, that you can be employed as guide for hunting parties wishing to hunt in the Clearwater, north of Bradleyburg. I do not wish to hunt game, but I do wish to penetrate that country in search of my fiance, Mr. Harold Lounsbury, of whom doubtless you have heard, and who disappeared in the Clearwater district six years ago. I will be accompanied by Mr. Lounsbury's uncle, Kenly Lounsbury, and I wish you to secure the outfit and a man to cook at once. You will be paid the usual outfitter's rates for thirty days. We will arrive in Bradleyburg September twentieth by stage.

Yours sincerely,
VIRGINIA TREMONT

This was the note that brought Bill Bronson to the brink of Grizzly River on a snow-driven day of October. In his party were Kenly Lounsbury, his nephew's fiancee, Virginia, and Bronson's cook, Vosper.

The weather, promising fair when they had ridden out of Bradleyburg into the forest, had turned cold. A heavy snow blanketed the forest, a snow that might have induced Bill Bronson to turn back, except for two things.

One was the promise that he had given Virginia Tremont to find her lost lover—a man whom he dimly recollected as having met several years previously. The other was that this trip into the wilderness gave him one more chance to look for his father's lost mine, somewhere beyond Grizzly River.

Bronson's father and a man named Rutherford had discovered this mine; they worked it together for a season and then no more could be learned of them or their whereabouts—till it was verified that Rutherford had crossed from Canada into the State with the whole season's gleanings—gold amounting to a vast sum. Beyond the border he disappeared completely—and the only possible deduction was that he had murdered the elder Bronson and stolen the gold.

The trip from Bradleyburg to Grizzly River had been an arduous one. On the other side was a cabin which Bronson had created as part of the chain he used when trapping. The river, flowing wild, threatened death. But beyond was comfort.

Kenly Lounsbury fresh from his office where he had amassed wealth by his wits, wanted that comfort.

"Can't you try the ford?" he demanded of Bill.

"Sure, if you want," answered the woodsman, tall, straight, square-shouldered, not a daredevil but not lacking in courage.

As Bill rode into those gray and terrible waters on Mulvaney, a horse whose mettle equaled his rider's, Virginia Tremont's first instinct was to call him back, but for a single second she hesitated.

Then she pressed forward to the water's brink on Buster, a mount with heart of steel but lacking in the staying qualities that had given Mulvaney a name throughout the Clearwater.

"Oh, come back!" she finally found words. "Bronson—Bill—come back! Oh, why did I ever let you go?"

For Bill did not look around. Already the sound of the waters had drowned the voices on the shore. Again she called unheard. Then she lashed her horse with the bridle rein.

The animal strode down into the water. Vosper, his [illegible] whimpering within him, said [illegible] the last place in the line for Lounsbury tried to seize her bridle as she pushed forward.

"Where are you going, you fool?" he cried. "Come back!"

The girl turned her head. Her face was white. "You told him to go," she replied. "Now—I'm the fool enough to follow him."

The water splashed about the horse's knees.

Ahead of her, a dim shape in the half-light, Bill still rode on toward the opposite shore. And now, one halfway across, he was in the full force of the current.

It was all too plain that Mulvaney was battling for its life.

But Mulvaney was tired. Perhaps some of his rider's strength went into his thews and sustained him, though the water dropped lower. He was most to safety.

At that instant Bill glanced around, intending to warn his party not to attempt the crossing. He saw the shape of Virginia close behind him, riding into the full strength of the current.

All color swept in an instant from his face, leaving it gray and [illegible] the twilight light.

He knew that Buster's strength was not that of Mulvaney, and he saw them in the deepest, wildest part of the river that lay before him.

"Turn back," he said. "Turn, horse. Virginia—stop, in you can."

At the same instant he turned his horse back into the full fury of the current.

Inch by inch, struggling to keep his feet, Mulvaney pushed on, clear to the deepest, wildest portion of the stream. And then Virginia's horse pitched forward into the wild waters.

In the half-light it was impossible even for Bill to follow the lightning events of the next second. He saw the horse struggle, flounder, then roll on his back from the force of the current, the water sweep him down as the wind sweeps a straw. And he saw Virginia struggle to shake loose from the saddle. He had but an instant's glimpse of a white face in the gray water, of hair that streamed, an instant's realization in a time cry that the waters closed.

He knew the terror of that gray whirlpool below. He had every reason to believe that by no possible effort of his could he save the girl, he might only throw away his own life.

Yet he was out of the saddle almost the moment that the waters engulfed her, he sprang with his full strength into the stream.

From the bank the two men saw it as in a dream. They called out in their hoarse voices and they gazed with horror-stricken eyes. The waters swept the struggling figures down the stream and out of their sight.

Mulvaney, tireless, was battling against them through the torrent toward them through the torrent.

The storm recommenced, the wind sighed in the spruce tops, and the snow settled down into the gray waters.

II

Bill Bronson had no realization of the cold strength of the stream until he felt it around his body.

He swam with his eyes open, full in the current and with a really inspired speed. And by the mercy of the unseen gods almost at once he saw the shadow of Virginia's dark hair in the water.

The man [illegible] simply to leap toward the water. And in an instant his arms went about her.

"Let yourself to the current," he shouted. "And hang on to me."

He knew the river. They were just [illegible] upon a stretch of water [illegible] of old by the riverman that [illegible] ran down the stream [illegible] a place of [illegible] and rings and boulders. Up to now she [illegible] to comradeship [illegible] had held herself [illegible]

But he was a [illegible] ter, the outcome, [illegible] and only inhospitable end of their trail could never be [illegible]

"Yes—"

"Then put your [illegible] der. I'll try to work [illegible] shore."

Her fingers locked [illegible] his shirt. And he [illegible] time, to cross the [illegible] water between [illegible]

He had never [illegible] test. Every ounce [illegible] was needed. He [illegible] and shod, and [illegible] was scarcely able [illegible] More than once he [illegible] ening.

But the river [illegible] after all. A jack [illegible] the shore, and its [illegible] clothed with need[illegible] merged, forty feet [illegible]

Bill's arm [illegible] snatched at it in [illegible] impulse of his [illegible] grip held fast.

He drew himself [illegible] on the slender [illegible] along it toward the [illegible] were half out of the [illegible] a moment later the [illegible] river bottom again.

The thought of [illegible] even come to her.
